Television in the Middle Ages? A friend and follower of St. Francis of Assisi, Clare suffered from ill health for most of her life. One Christmas Eve she was too ill to rise from her bed to attend Mass at the new Basilica of St. Francis. Although she was more than a mile away she saw Mass on the wall of her dormitory. So clear was the vision that the next day she could name the friars at the celebration. It was for this miracle that St. Clare of Assisi was named the patroness of television.
